ness upon his own admission, the fact that more had been obtained, is obvious to those who have visited the sumptuous parlors occupied by the New York state greenback party at the Hotel New York, New York City. These facts even come to my knowledge little by little. It is a natural desire to protect our party in scandal, but not see an ensue we have loved to cherish, through the treachery of a few, induced us to remain in silence. We are of general suspicion, and Gen. Weaver's name has called forth the protest of such persons as the Hon. Charles Lydell, of Pennsylvania, and I think both for the cause, as well as your reputation and the integrity of the party, the truth should be known. When our party becomes a political machine necessary to elect the president to the position, it will be referred to us in the discussion of the resolutions in congress as "the spawn

Appl. Application of an Old German

There was a "once upon a time," when fairy stories, as a little German town in which habitants, related in the most interesting what seemed to them a remarkably new and a further continuation to tell them what direction the wind blew—much more than a prodigious and magnificent weathercock, summing up, for years and time out of mind this faithful little vessel with every changing breeze and kept it so accurately accurate; for, as all subsidiary things fall into old age and disappear, so in course of time the village weathercock acquired the prey of rain, and one day came to turn with the wind. It became fixed in its position, pointing due south.

The weathercock should come to tell the truth, did not occur in the simple townsmen. The wind veered all about the compass, it blew north, west, east, but they looked up at their range and were satisfied that it still stood in the south. A few of the older men remarked upon the phenomenon of so long continued a month wind; but a few days later, they asserted that it was not a month wind at all, but a stiff northerly, or a drying west wind, and a northerly one, they were summarily put down by the burgomasters, who one after another admonished the people to pay attention to the weathercock, and to look at the weather-
